5

Abstract

The present invention relates to the use of bromelaine proteases for inhibiting blood coagulation, especially for stimulating the production of plasmin, for inhibiting the production of fibrin and for inhibiting the adhesion of human thrombocytes on endothelilum cells. Especially the basic proteases isolable from raw bromelaine have proved to be particularly suitable proteases.